

Building social mobility in construction

📍 Browne Jacobson, Birmingham

📅 02 July 2025

We are excited to deliver this event in partnership with Constructing Excellence Midlands.

This event is dedicated to exploring the practical steps that any construction sector stakeholder can take to increase socio-economic inclusion in their workforce and within the supply chain. By collectively driving and promoting social mobility, our organisations can collaborate to create a more diverse and inclusive construction sector for the benefit of the communities in which we live, and for society as a whole.

You will hear how the power of the supply chain can be harnessed to provide mentoring, work experience, and open the door to more work opportunities and good quality jobs for those who are marginalised in society.

We will be joined by:

- Andrew Carpenter, Chief Executive Officer of Constructing Excellence Midlands
- James Crow, Director of Mixed Tenure at Harworth Group
- Natasha Heritage and Sue Woollett, Social Value Managers at Stepnell
- Tom Lyas, Head of Resourcing and Social Mobility at Browne Jacobson

Topics will include:

- The lessons learnt and successes enjoyed by a range of stakeholders actively engaging with social mobility in the sector;
- How private sector developers are seeking to build social mobility by supporting a range of projects;
- The practical steps that all organisations can take to increase socio-economic inclusion, internally and within the supply chain; and
- The Social Mobility Index, and how employers are achieving success through engagement with the Social Mobility Foundation.

Register now to secure your place and be part of a movement that is working towards a more equitable and inclusive future for the construction sector in the region.
