

Browne Jacobson advises Literacy Capital on the acquisition and investment in test automation software specialist Trinitatum

14 March 2025

UK and Ireland law firm Browne Jacobson has advised Literacy Capital plc (Literacy Capital) on its investment into Trinitatum, a provider of test automation software and related services within the energy and financial trading markets.

Trinitatum is well-positioned to leverage its innovative software, Triangle, to serve new industries beyond its core markets. This investment will allow Trinitatum to respond to increasing international interest, scale operations, and further refine its product offering to meet the evolving needs of its blue-chip customer base.

Browne Jacobson's team was led by partner Sandra Wong with support from senior associate Matthew Dorman, associates Jonathan Bradley and Alys Bratch.

Sandra Wong, Partner at Browne Jacobson, said: "We are pleased to have advised Literacy Capital on this latest investment as it continues to support high-growth, innovative businesses.

"Literacy Capital's strategic approach and commitment to long-term success will be instrumental in Trinitatum's expansion in market presence and the further development of its proprietary technology.

"This is another great example of how we're working with clients at the forefront of their sectors and developing new technology-driven innovations to push forward their capabilities."

James Knott, Investment Director at Literacy Capital said: "We see enormous potential in Trinitatum's market-leading technology and service offering.

"The company has already built a strong reputation for delivering high-quality automation solutions and we believe it can scale even further to meet growing demand both in the UK and internationally. Browne Jacobson's expert legal guidance was invaluable in ensuring the transaction was executed smoothly and efficiently."

Trinitatum was founded in 2013 by Jed Dalton and Steve Baker, who have spent over a decade refining its proprietary software to integrate seamlessly with customers' platforms.

Literacy Capital is an investment fund that partners with high-potential private companies, supporting their growth and development. The firm provides long-term capital and strategic guidance, working alongside management teams to help businesses scale effectively.

Since its inception in 2017, Literacy Capital has completed 26 platform investments, partnering with ambitious businesses to support their long-term growth. Trinitatum now joins a growing portfolio of innovative, high-growth private companies benefitting from Literacy Capital's strategic guidance and capital investment.
